1. A group of about 120 soldiers of the 1928 class, together with about 80 civilian workers who are all specialists, have arrived at the airfield at Pruszcz (Praust - Q55/Y41). The 1928 class has not as yet been demobilized. The civilian workers came from Gdansk (Danzig) or its vicinity.
2. All soldiers and members of the SP (Service to Poland) at the airfield are housed in newly-completed barracks which were recently erected along the northern border of the airfield. Barracks which are being built along the southern border are still not ready for occupancy.
3. The temporary railroad which goes from the Pruszcz railroad station to the center of the field has been extended and now goes to the eastern border of the field. Concrete aircraft revetments, replacing former hangars, have been built along the eastern border, as well as along the southern border; the revetments measure about three meters in depth.
